The sun is up.
The cat, the dog, and the rat play.

They see a big box.
It is by the logs.

The rat sniffs the box.
"What is in it?" he asks.

A bug is in the box.
It goes zig-zag in the box.

The dog tilts his head.
"Is it a pet?" he says.

The cat taps the box.
Tap, tap, tap.

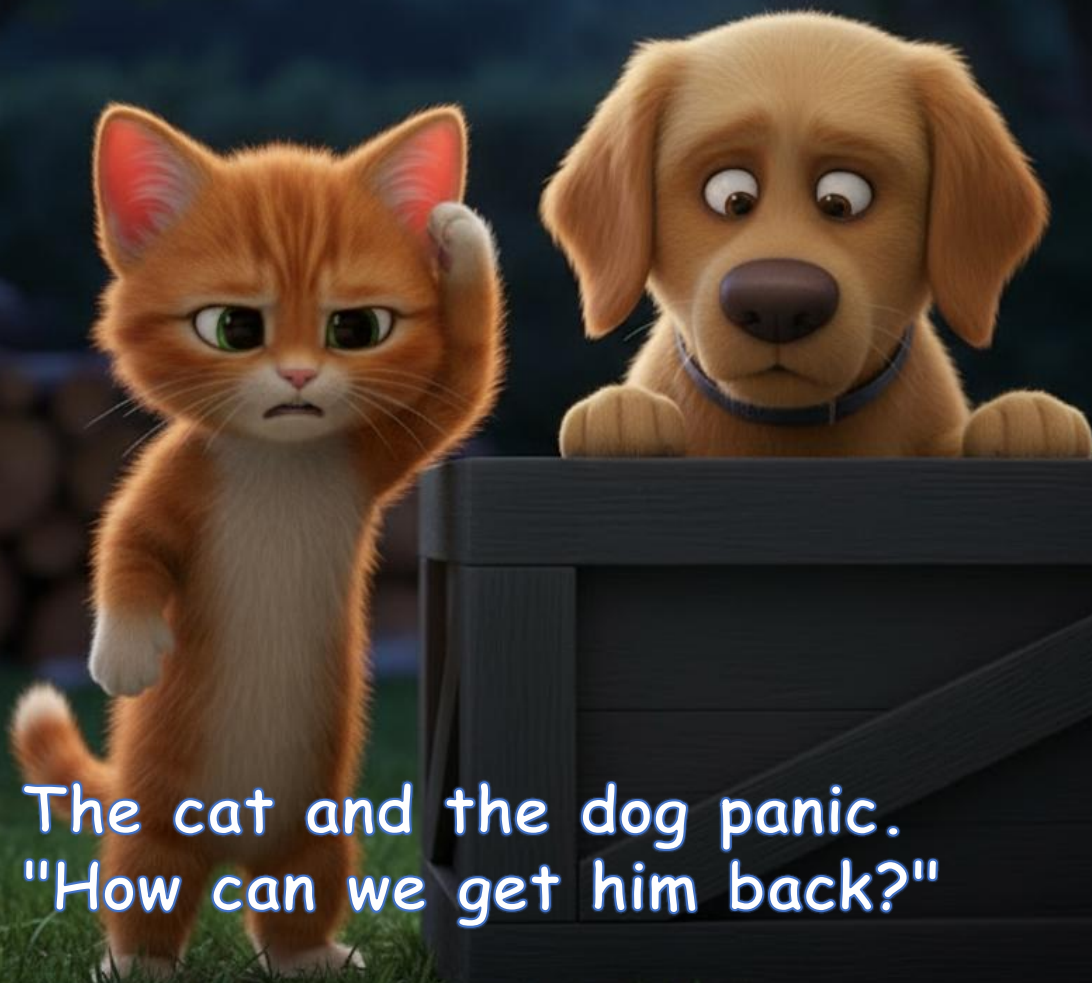

The rat naps on the box.
He finds a gap in the box.

He peeks in the box. It is very dark in the box.

He slips and falls in.
"Help!" he yells from in.

The cat and the dog panic.
"How can we get him back?"

[illegible]

The lid pops off!
The rat jumps out.
Six bugs hop out!

The bugs are not pets.
They are free now.

A vibrant, cartoon-style illustration of three beloved characters playing in a wooden crate. Jerry the mouse is perched on top of the crate, holding a small piece of cheese. Spot the dog is standing on his hind legs, leaning over the crate with a joyful expression. Garfield the cat is sitting inside the crate, looking up at the others with a wide, happy grin. The scene is set outdoors at sunset, with a warm, orange and pink sky and silhouettes of trees in the background. The overall mood is cheerful and playful.

The big box is a fun den.
They play in it.

The sun has set.
The cat, dog, and rat nap in the box.
